LEXINGTON has another sensation in the disappearance of Tilburn Baker, a well-known farmer and trader of Fayette County. He leaves a number of creditors behind him. His down-fall is attributed to his infatuation for a Cincinnati woman. The two are thought to be in Kansas City.

COLONEL OPIE, of Covington, has lately recovered a judgment for $36,000 against parties in West Virginia that involves an unusual question. Years ago Opie's father sold a farm to a man named Castleman, and took bonds payable in gold. During the war Castleman went to the mother of Colonel Opie and purchased the outstanding bonds with Confederate money. Colonel Opie filed a suit and claimed that Confederate money was not collateral, and that the contract called for the payment of the bonds issued in gold, and Judge Jackson, of the United States Court, decides in his favor.

DEATH OF W. T. COLE.

A Citizen of Mason County Who was Worth $90,000 at One Time Leaves no Estate Behind Him.

It was W. T. Cole who died last Saturday near Shannon and not W. C. Cole as stated yesterday. The remains of the deceased were interred yesterday.

Mr. Cole was born on the 23rd day of April, 1830, and consequently was past fifty-seven years of age. He was married twice. His first wife, a Miss Oracraft, died some years ago. His last wife, a Miss Mulligan, survives him. He leaves a large family of children.

The deceased deserves more than a passing notice. At one time he was among the richest farmers in Mason County. That was some ten or twelve years ago. At the date referred to he engaged in grain speculations and made about $90,000 in a very short time. His family and friends tried to persuade him to give up the business then and retire with the money he had made, but like many others he wanted to make a little more. He promised, however, to quit as soon as he increased his profits to $100,000. That was his aim, but he never accomplished it. On the contrary, luck turned against him. He began to lose, and it was not long until the $90,000 he had made was all gone. He still attempted to retrieve his fortunes but he never succeeded. Fortune refused to smile upon him and what little he had left was soon gone. He left but little if any property to his children.

Milt Barlow's Newspaper Experience

Milt Barlow, the well-known negro minstrel, is still in jail at New York for contempt of court in refusing to pay the alimony awarded to his wife in her successful suit for divorce. In a recent interview he said: "Confinement has not crushed me. To be sure it isn't pleasant to have an iron door between you and the organ-grinder when he plays the 'Sweet By and By.' On the whole I don't have such a bad time of it here. I have had lots of fun in my time, and no doubt I shall see more of it before I die. I started out on the business of life as a type-setter. At one time in my early career I went to work on a small paper for a man in Kentucky. I suggested to him that it would be necessary to have an imposing stone. The next morning when I arrived at the office the stone was in position, but my suspicions were aroused by some red clay clinging to one corner of the stone. Crawling under the stone and lying upon my back I looked up and saw these words: 'Sacred to the memory of Michael Jones, who died April 8, 1854, aged 67 years. Requiescat in pace.' He had taken his father's gravestone from the church yard and used it as a table upon which to make up his paper."

Did Ashton Suicide?

Mention was made yesterday of the sudden death of Eugene Ashton, the elocutionist, in Philadelphia last Saturday. No particulars of his sudden demise had been learned, and his cause was not known. He had reached Philadelphia only the night before from New York, and as far as known was in his usual health.

An Enquirer special from Philadelphia says: "Dr. Formad, the Coroner's physician, Sunday held a post-mortem examination on the body. Unmistakable traces of poison were found by the physician, but it is uncertain as to whether the deadly drug was taken with suicidal intent or not, for after the man was admitted to the hospital he said that he had felt sick and had gone into a drug store and asked for medicine to relieve him. With this he sank into unconsciousness and soon died."

"His friends are entirely reticent concerning Ashton, and they have refused to talk about his death."

Still the Maysville and Big Sandy.

The Maysville and Big Sandy Railroad Company has not been consolidated with the Elizabethtown, Lexington and Big Sandy. Reports to the contrary are not correct. The matter came up before the meeting of the directors held in this city last Friday. General Echols, of Louisville, H. E. Huntington, General Manager of the Kentucky Central, Colonel Frank S. Owens, Hon. W. H. Wadsworth and Mr. James Barbour were among those present at this meeting. The order heretofore passed consolidating the two roads was not attested. On the contrary it was rescinded, and the new road will go it alone and be known by its old name.

A MAYSVILLE MAN.

A Gifted Son of This City Who Has Gained a National Reputation as a Dramatist and Artist.

A recent issue of the Cincinnati Times-Star says: "Kentucky has always been famous for its many brilliant sons. One of that gifted galaxy, though to the manner born, has adopted Cincinnati as his home. Montgomery Phister is a young man, in fact, has hardly shed the down of his youth, yet he has a National reputation as a vigorous dramatic writer, dramatist, artist and conversationalist, and is better known in the larger cities of the country, where these qualities are prized, than even in Cincinnati, for 'a prophet is without honor in his own country.' For years he was the dramatic critic of the old Gazette, and after its consolidation with the Commercial he went in on the new deal as dramatic editor. But he did not confine himself to the drama. A clever artist, both by nature and training, he shortly after made the pages of the Commercial Gazette blossom with some of the cleverest political cartoons. Still following out the best of his genius, he has contributed many of the most exquisite literary creations, full of delicacy and honest sentiment, which have traveled the rounds of the press."

"He has an inventive mind and is constantly adding some new and valuable discovery to his stock of art knowledge and his studio and study are perfect little museums within themselves. A few seasons ago he gave to the stage that imitatively funny creation, 'A Soap Bubble.' At present he is engaged in writing another comedy that competent judges claim is the best production of his mind."

Fire in Chester.

The new building belonging to Doe Holiday, near the postoffice in Chester, was reported on fire as we went to press.

THE Court of Appeals has recently ruled that "an indictment under the statute for willful and malicious shooting and wounding with intent to kill need not charge that the act was done feloniously. As every act essential to constitute the crime is set forth in the statute, an indictment which follows the language of the statute is good."

In a letter to the Louisville Times from Edinburgh, Scotland, Charles E. Kincaid says: "Miss Marie Decca (Johnstone), of Mason County, Ky., stock, has signed for a tour through the British Isles with Mapleson, and makes her debut in Dublin this month in the Magic Flute. Miss Decca studied for three years in Paris, and has a voice capable of the most classic and brilliant executions."

DRS. ISHMAEL and OWENS have taken the office on Third street so long occupied by Dr. Shackelford, and offer their professional services to the citizens of Maysville and Mason County. Dr. Ishmael brings an experience of fifteen years, while Dr. Owens has been for four years an inmate, either as a student or practitioner of the old office from which physic has been dispensed during nearly half a century. We heartily commend the new firm to the favorable consideration of the public.

The "Two Orphans."

The play at the opera house last night was one of the best yet given by Gilbert Comedy Company. The "Two Orphans" was on the programme for the evening, and, although the company had rehearsed it but once, the rendition of the various parts was a splendid one, and was loudly applauded.

To-night will be given for the first time here, the romantic Irish drama, "Ardenale."

Wants a Divorce.

Rev. Ph. Wittich, who recently resigned pastoral charge of the Lutheran Church at Ripley, has sued his wife for a divorce. His petition was filed in the Common Pleas Court at Georgetown a few days ago. He alleges cruelty and desertion on the part of his wife, and claims that she brought about the resignation of his position as pastor at Ripley by circulating slanderous reports about him. Among other stories she told about him was one in which she charged him with drunkenness and keeping bad company. She left him some time ago and returned to her parents in Pennsylvania.

County Court Proceedings.

The last will and testament of Henry Bramel, together with the codicils thereto, was filed, proved and admitted to record. The will names John T. Bramel and John W. Power as executors, and directs them to sell all the real and personal estate of the deceased. One third of the estate is willed to his wife, Mrs. Mary Maria Bramel, and the remaining two-thirds of the property is to be divided equally among his five children.

Charles Painter was appointed to fill the vacancy as overseer of roads in road district No. 4, Murphysville precinct, caused by the removal of David Tomlin to another part of the county.
